A quick poke around the k100.biz FAQ makes this out as a fairly simple to fix issue, but there is something ominous in there about "new parts" and "your dealer might not be able to get you the old parts". I suspect that this may mean you'll have to replace the whole water/oil pump assembly.

Yesterday we received one XPS ONE (915WTK1) similar, but not identical, to some others we already bought in the past. Apparently, the main differences are more memory (6G instead of 4), auxiliary SSD and the touch screen. The unit was performing very well and we could install all what we needed (onli...

Hi, All. I recently received my Chinese made Hall sensors for my k75. It has the full fairing and the wires disappear up and into it. Just wondering what all has to be done to replace them before I start yanking things apart?Can the wire be cut and a connector spliced in? The OEM wires are much longer than the replacement ones. Also, how does one "time" the round plate that they mount to?
